

The Authors

Hans-Jürgen Zahorka, Government Advisor, from LIBERTAS, has worked repeatedly in the South Caucasus region and in particular Armenia. This text – an updated version of an article from 2003 – exists in German only. For the English (original) version from 2003 you may download the text from www.libertas-institut.eu (Enlargement/CIS).

Nona Abazyan from Vanadzor/Armenia and Yerevan works at present as Personal Assistant to the CEO of a big international bank in Yerevan, before as Head of External Relations in a business group. She is also in her own company, S.A.N. Ltd. where she was responsible for translations and foreign business. After studies in foreign languages in Vanadzor State Teachers Training Institute and Texas/USA, she continued at Centre for Social Studies, Tbilisi State University, Georgia, where she obtained a MA degree in January 2007. She has worked for several years as head of project design and fundraising for the Armenian Constitutional Right-Protective Centre (ACRPC), as well as in tourism promotion.

Nune G. Harutyunyan is a development and human rights professional with more than 12 years of experience on national and international levels. She has got an LLM in International Human Rights Law from Lund University/Sweden and an MA in International Studies and conflict resolution from university of Denver/USA. After working for the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Armenia, on development and gender (for UNDP) and for Armenian European Policy and Legal Advice Centre she is currently managing a project on “Empowerment of Rural Women” implemented by the International Centre for Agribusiness Research and Education. She is the author of several publications in the areas of human rights, gender, conflict and European integration.