5. BASIC PRINCIPLES

Article 12

(principle of equality)

(1) The public partner shall ensure that no distinction is made between candidates at any element or stage of the procedure of establishing and operating a public-private partnership, and that it does not create circumstances that entail local, objective or personal discrimination against candidates, discrimination stemming from classification of the activities performed by the candidate, or any another discrimination.

(2) The public partner may not deal differently with candidates that are in the same or essentially similar legal and actual position, nor may it deal equally with candidates that are in essentially different legal or actual positions.

Article 13

(principle of transparency)

(1) In establishing a public private partnership the public partner must ensure the objective seeking of candidates by ensuring the highest possible degree of public information in proportion to the purpose, nature, subject and value (scope) of the public-private partnership project.

(2) All tender notices and other procedural documents in the process of establishing public-private partnerships (selection document and so forth) must be published on the worldwide web.

(3) In the procedure of establishing a public-private partnership the public partner shall ensure that candidates have access to the same information for preparing applications and for participating in the establishment procedure, as well as to information on the conditions and criteria for candidate selection. Public-private partnership contractors must be selected in a transparent manner and according to the prescribed procedure.

Article 14

(principle of proportionality)

(1) In the procedure of establishment and in operating a public-private partnership, the public partner may only employ those measures to achieve the objective provided by law or by a regulation issued on the basis thereof that:

- objectively lead to this objective,
- restrict or adversely affect to the least degree the private partner, or represent the mildest measure for achieving this objective, and
- in their scope and consequences are comparable to the significance of the objective

(2) Unilateral encroachments by the public partner on the public-private partner relationship shall be governed, unless otherwise provided by law, mutatis mutandis by the rules of obligational law regarding compensation liability owing to breach of contract (reimbursement of actual damages and lost profits).

Article 15

(principle of balance)

(1) In a public-private partnership a balance of rights, obligations and legal benefits between the public and private partners shall be ensured. Ensuring the public interest (ensuring public goods or services) shall be within the competence of the public partner, but both partners shall ensure the interests of users and all other participants, both in the procedure of establishment and of operating the public-private partnership project.

(2) Risk must be spread within the public-private partnership such that it is borne by the party that can most easily control it; in any event the public-private partnership contractor must, irrespective of the nature of the public-private partnership, bear at least part of the commercial risk (market risk associated with the scope of demand, supply and availability risk).

(3) Where a public-private partnership contractor does not bear even part of the commercial risk, the relationship, irrespective of its title or of the provisions of a special law, shall not be a public-private partnership pursuant to this Act.

Article 16

(principle of competition)

In the procedure of establishing a public-private partnership the public partner may not restrict competition among candidates. In creating and operating a public-private partnership the public partner shall act in compliance with the regulations on protecting or preventing the restriction of competition.

Article 18

(principle of subsidiary liability)

(2) The public partner shall bear subsidiary liability for damages caused to the users of services or other persons by the contractor in operating a public-private partnership. Users of services or other persons may demand reimbursement for damages from the public partner after submitting a written demand for compensation from the public-private partnership contractor and giving the contractor a reasonable time in which to provide reimbursement, whereupon the contractor has not responded to the demand or has partly or entirely rejected the demand for reimbursement. In relation to the contractor, the public partner shall have the right to reimbursement of such damages and of all associated costs.

(3) By transferring the provision of the subject of public-private partnership to the public-private partnership contractor, the public partner is not absolved of liability for the uninterrupted, undisturbed and equal implementation of the project. Any other agreement between the parties shall have no bearing on relations towards third parties.

Article 19

(principle of cooperation)

The public partner shall assist the public-private partnership contractor in securing the necessary material and other rights and the various permits which the contractor alone cannot obtain, in compliance with regulations and the public-private partnership contract.

(3) The Ministry shall also keep records of public-private partnership projects and monitor them, and shall offer expert assistance to other public partners on the national (sectoral units) or local levels in formulating documents serving to determine the fulfilment of the economic, legal and other conditions for the creation and operation of public-private partnerships, in seeking technical solutions for public-private partnerships and in all other issues relating to the formation of relationships or carrying out the procedure for selecting private partners. On the basis of good practices it shall draw up guidelines and standards for the selection, monitoring and assessment of public-private partnership projects.

(4) The Ministry shall link and coordinate its work with budgetary planning and the implementation of capital and other projects that might be the subject of public-private partnership, and shall keep records of public-private partnership contracts, and on the basis of annual information and reports shall also draw up annual reports on the success of implementation of individual public-private partnership projects.

(5) The Ministry shall work to provide education, information exchange, public presentations and promotion of the possibility of public-private partnership on the national and local levels.

(6) The substance and record-keeping for projects and records of public-private partnership contracts shall be regulated by an implementing regulation issued on the basis of this Act by the minister competent for finance.

Article 25

(application of regulations in implementing equity partnership)

Equity partnerships shall be implemented in compliance with this Act, the act regulating commercial public services and the act regulating public finances.

2. CONTRACTUAL PARTNERSHIP

Article 26

(forms of contractual partnership)

Contractual partnerships may have the form of:

- a concession; i.e. a bilateral legal relationship between the state or self-governing local community or other person of public law as the awarding authority and a legal or natural person as a concessionaire, in which the awarding authority awards to the concessionaire the special or exclusive right to perform a commercial public service or other activity in the public interest, which may include the construction of structures and facilities that are in part or entirely in the public interest (hereinafter: concession partnership), or
- a public procurement relationship; i.e. a payment relationship between the client and supplier of goods, contractor of works or provider of services, of which the subject is the procurement of goods or the performance of works or services (hereinafter: public procurement partnership).

Article 27

(distinction between public procurement and concession partnership)

(1) If the public partner bears the majority or entirety of the commercial risk involved in operating a public-private partnership project, the public-private partnership, irrespective of its title or arrangement in a special law, for the purposes of this Act shall not be deemed to be a concession, but a public procurement partnership.

(2) In cases referred to in the preceding paragraph, instead of the provisions on public tenders, direct awarding and legal or/and judicial protection in the procedure for awarding concessions, for the selection of public-private partnership contractor and legal safety in this procedure the regulations on public procurement shall apply. Pursuant to this Act, such relationships shall be deemed to be public procurement partnerships.

(3) When the procedure of selecting a private partner referred to in the preceding paragraph has been completed, depending on the nature and form of the relationship, a concession contract shall be made, in compliance with the act regulating commercial public services, and in the event that the relationship has the form of an equity partnership, an equity partnership contract.

(4) If the subject of concession is the performance of a commercial public service or other activity where in order to protect the public interest, the law expressly prescribes the issuing of an administrative decision, prior to concluding a contract referred to in the preceding paragraph the awarding authority must issue to the concessionaire a decision awarding it the right to perform such activity. There shall be no other participants (parties, side participants) in the administrative procedure of issuing decisions.

Article 28

(deciding in doubtful cases)

If it is not possible from the circumstances of a public-private partnership to determine who bears the majority of commercial risk, where there is doubt, it shall be deemed to be a public procurement partnership.

Article 29

(mutatis mutandis application)

The rule regarding the distinction between public procurement and concession partnerships provided in the previous articles shall also apply mutatis mutandis for adjudication of the status of equity partnership.

Article 30

(changes to commercial risk)

If in the procedure of selecting a concessionaire it is determined that owing to the spread of commercial risk between the public and private partners the relationships referred to in Articles 27, 28 and 29 of this Act do not have the nature of a concession, but rather of a public procurement partnership, the public partner must continue the process of selection according to the rules on public procurement partnerships, but prior to this it must repeat all the actions in the procedure which differ owing to the changed nature of the public-private partnership relationship (such as the substance of works concession and works procurement publication).

PART III: PUBLIC-PRIVATE PARTNERSHIP PROCEDURE

1. PRELIMINARY PROCEDURE

Article 31

(purpose of the preliminary procedure)

(1) Prior to taking a decision on public-private partnership, the public partner shall initiate a preliminary procedure on the basis of which the decision is made to operate a public-private partnership project or terminate the procedure.

(2) The purpose of the preliminary procedure is to determine, on the basis of a capital elaborate, whether the economic, legal, technical, environmental and other conditions for implementing the project and establishing a public-private partnership have been fulfilled, and to define the fundamental elements of public-private partnership to determine the substance of the decision and/or document on public-private partnership. For non-capital programmes, instead of a capital elaborate another appropriate document with the same function shall be used.

(3) The assessment of the economic feasibility of the project or programme shall be performed by the public partner in compliance with the regulation referred to in the fourth paragraph of Article 8 of this Act.

Article 32

(call to promoters)

(1) The public partner shall as a rule issue once a year a call to potential promoters to submit applications regarding their interest in operating a public-private partnership in areas where the conditions might be met for public cofinancing of a private project (such as constructing a private, publicly accessible car park) or where there exists an interest in private investment in public projects (such as commercial municipal services in the areas of sewerage or gas supply).

(2) Public partners referred to in point 1 of Article 5 of this Act shall issue calls referred to in the preceding paragraph no later than following inclusion of the project in the plan of development programmes or other document of similar substance once a year, within three months of adoption of the budget.

Article 33

(content of call)

(1) Public calls referred to in the preceding article shall set out the substance of applications regarding interest and the expectations as to which documents promoters must attach or which aspects of public-private partnership to present.

(2) Public calls referred to in the preceding paragraph which already contain a definition of the public partner's requirements and the essential elements from the capital elaborate, may not prejudice forms of public-private partnership or the substance of decisions and documents on public-private partnership.

Article 34

(initiation of preliminary procedure)

(1) The public partner shall initiate the preliminary procedure on its own initiative or on the basis of an application regarding interest in operating a public-private partnership.

- whether the proposed project runs counter to the Constitution or law,
- whether it involves activities that are so closely linked to the protection of state, official or military secrets that implementing the procedure would prevent the protection of such secrets,
- whether the conditions referred to in Article 8 of this Act have been fulfilled (value of project, public partner, subject of public-private partnership), or
- whether the activity that is the subject of the proposal is already being performed.

Article 35

(rights of promoter)

(1) A person that has submitted an application regarding interest in operating a public-private partnership has the same rights as other candidates in the ensuing procedure of establishment. Submission of an application regarding interest shall not be deemed to indicate that the investor is also a candidate in the further procedure of selecting a contractor.

(2) If an application regarding interest in establishing a public-private partnership encloses documents that comprehensively set out the legal, economic, technical, environmental and other conditions for implementing the procedure or signify some other kind of original concept, the public partner may, in compliance with the regulations governing public procurement awards, opt to purchase them (for instance a procedure with negotiations and without prior publication), irrespective of whether it continues the procedure for establishing a public-private partnership.

(3) If a public partner, on the basis of an application from an interested person, does not implement the preliminary procedure or does not reach agreement with the investor regarding purchase of the documents, the public partner shall be obliged to return the documents to the investor. In this case the promoter shall retain all rights to the documents enclosed with the application regarding interest in establishing a public-private partnership.

2. INSTRUMENT ESTABLISHING PUBLIC-PRIVATE PARTNERSHIP

Article 36

(content of instrument establishing public-private partnership)

(2) A public-private partnership instrument shall be obligatory in the event that the contractor of a public-private partnership obtains a special or exclusive right to perform a commercial public service or other activity in the public interest, where owing to the protection of public interest the law requires the issuing of a concession or other general instrument.

(3) Where a public-private partnership involves a form of concession partnership, the instrument referred to in the first paragraph of this article shall be entitled "concession instrument". In the case of activities referred to in the preceding paragraph, the concession instrument shall be adopted in the form of a Government decree, a decision by the representative body of the self-governing local community or a general instrument of another public partner issued on the basis of public authorisation provided by a special act.

Article 37

(1) If several persons are acting on the side of the public partner in a public-private partner relationship, such persons shall adopt a joint public-private partnership instrument in compliance with the preceding article and in identical content.

(2) The public partners shall regulate their mutual relations in the public-private partnership through a contract concluded through adoption of the instrument referred to in the preceding paragraph.

(3) A joint public-private partnership instrument may be amended or entirely rescinded under conditions and restrictions provided by law, and only under a procedure identical to that in which it was adopted. Each public partner may itself under conditions and restrictions provided by law rescind the validity of the instrument within the scope of its competence, whereby the public-private partnership instrument shall retain its validity within the scope of competence of the other public partners.

(4) In a joint public-private partnership instrument the public partners shall appoint one of their number to conduct the procedure of selecting a private partner, to issue an instrument of selection and other instruments in connection with the public-private partnership.

(2) A candidate may only submit one application, and in the case of a joint application the same person may only participate in one application. In a public tender the public partner may stipulate other conditions for the submission of joint applications.

(3) Where necessary in view of the nature, scope and subject of the public-private partnership, it may be required in a public tender that in the event of a joint application by several persons being the most advantageous bid, such persons must prior to concluding a public-private partnership contract enter into a specific formal association with which the public partner will make a public-private partnership contract (hereinafter: project company).

(4) In joint applications the fulfilment of status conditions shall be determined for each candidate individually, and in accordance with the subject of public-private partnership, fulfilment of economic and financial, organisational, personnel and technical conditions for all candidates together. The public partner shall determine the method of demonstrating fulfilment of the conditions in joint applications in the tender documentation.

(5) The provision of the third paragraph of this article shall also apply mutatis mutandis where in a public tender an application is submitted by a candidate that intends for the operation of a public-private partnership to establish a project company, or where this is required by the public partner for operating a public-private partnership.

Article 39

(content of instrument establishing public-private partnership)

(1) Depending on the substance and nature of the public-private partnership, the content of the public-private partnership instrument must be sufficiently general not to impede negotiations between the public and private partners, in accordance with the fundamental principles of this Act.

(2) A special or exclusive right may be awarded on the basis of an act.

Article 40

(joint instrument)

(1) A decision on public-private partnership referred to in Article 11 of this Act and a public-private partnership instrument referred to in this chapter may be adopted in a joint instrument, if the conditions for so doing provided by this Act are fulfilled.

(2) Where this is not already regulated by a decision referred to in Article 11 of this Act, an instrument referred to in the preceding paragraph may serve in particular to:

- regulate the organisational and spatial plan for implementing public-private partnerships (type of contractor, any specific or exclusive rights, if the relevant conditions have been fulfilled);
- determine the public benefit to implement expropriation or the restriction of ownership of property, pursuant to the act regulating land use;
- regulate individual obligations applying to the public-private partnership;
- lay down the general conditions under which users may use the goods and services of the public-private partnership, which must be equal for the same categories of user;
- lay down the rights and obligations of users of public-private partnership goods or services, and the manner of their exercising and protection;

- regulate the envisaged financing of the public-private partnership and other financial relations between the public and private partners (such as the division of loss and profit and division of profits, and whether the refinancing of debt is involved).

(3) An instrument referred to in the preceding paragraphs may serve to regulate other issues involved in governing a public-private partnership, where they are regulated under law by the Government or the representative body of a self-governing local community, or where for other reasons they must be provided in a general instrument, otherwise such issues shall be regulated in a public-private partnership contract.

Article 31

(non-existence of instrument establishing public-private partnership)

(1) If the adoption of a special public-private partnership instrument is not envisaged, the essential components of the individual public-private partner relationship and other issues that must be framed in a regulation or other general instrument, shall be laid down in an instrument referred to in Article 11 of this Act (decision on public-private partnership).

(2) If the public partner has no special authorisation to regulate individual issues by law, regulation or general instrument (such as determining the method of financing for the public-private partnership, determining the prices of goods and services of the public-private partnership and so forth), such issues shall on the basis of a public tender be regulated in a public-private partnership contract.

3. PUBLIC TENDER

Article 42

(public tender procedure)

Irrespective of the form of selection instrument, a public-private partnership contractor shall be selected, unless otherwise provided by law, on the basis of a public tender, notice of which must also be published on the Internet.

Article 43

(public procurement partnership)

(1) In cases of public procurement partnerships, public tenders or the direct agreements and selection of a public-private partnership contractor, as well as the awarding of works to third parties, shall be governed by the Public Procurement Act, unless otherwise provided by this Act.

(2) Upon conclusion of the procedure for selecting a private partner, depending on the nature and form of relationship, a contract shall be made with the application mutatis mutandis of the provisions of a concession contract, in compliance with the act regulating commercial public services, or applying the rules of an equity partnership contract, in compliance with this Act, where this involves an equity partnership with the nature of public procurement.

(3) Application mutatis mutandis of the provisions of a concession contract in compliance with the act regulating commercial public services, or of the provisions of an equity partnership contract, shall be valid for the concluding of contracts, the substance of the partnership, the validity of contracts and their unilateral amendment, the rights and obligations of the public partner and contractor of a public-private partnership (orders for concessionaire works etc.), and for the transfer and termination of such relationships.

(application of regulations for selecting concession partnership contractor)

(1) In cases of concession partnerships where the concessionaire acquires the right to perform a commercial public service, public tenders or direct agreements, selection of public-private partnership contractors, legal and judicial protection in these procedures and concession contracts and the awarding of works to third parties shall also be governed by the act regulating commercial public services.

(2) In cases of concession partnerships where the concessionaire acquires a special or exclusive right to perform some other activity (other public service), and where for the purpose of protecting the public interest the law expressly provides the issuing of an administrative decision, public tenders or direct agreements, selection of public-private partnership contractors, legal and judicial protection in these procedures and concession contracts and the awarding of works to third parties shall also be governed mutatis mutandis by the act regulating commercial public services.

Article 45

(application of regulations for selecting equity partnership)

In cases of equity partnerships, public tenders or the direct agreements and selection of a public-private partnership contractor in these procedures, as well as the awarding of works to third parties, shall be governed mutatis mutandis by the Public Procurement Act, unless otherwise provided by this Act or a special act.

Article 46

(competitive dialogue procedure)

(1) Irrespective of the form and the regulation of the public-private partnership procedure in a special act, in selecting a public-private partnership contractor the procedure of competitive dialogue may be used for selecting the most economically advantageous bid.

(2) The public partner shall initiate the procedure of competitive dialogue through public tender, which shall set out the aims and requirements associated with the public-private partnership project. The public partner may also set out the aims and requirements in the tender documentation, instead of or in addition to in the public tender.

(3) In the first stage of competitive dialogue, in compliance with the terms set out in the public tender, the public partner shall select candidates with which in the second stage of the procedure it shall conduct a dialogue at determining and defining the funds and the most appropriate solution to satisfy the aims and requirements of the public partner. In this dialogue the public partner may discuss with selected candidates all aspects of the public-private partnership project and where necessary may compare solutions with each other.

(4) In the case of a public procurement partnership, the minimum number of candidates in the procedure of competitive dialogue, except in the event of dialogues that permit the issuing of a public procurement order without public tender (protection of exclusive rights, exceptional urgency of events and so forth) shall be three.

(5) Where there are objective reasons, such as the non-existence of major competition in the market or where there is no demonstrable interest, and unless the public-private partnership has the nature of public procurement, the number of candidates may also be less than three.

(6) During competitive dialogue the public partner must ensure equal treatment of all candidates, whereby it must especially without discrimination provide candidates with information, including information obtained on the basis of applications regarding interest referred to in Article 34 of this Act, in order to prevent any unjustified advantage in the selection procedure.

(7) Irrespective of the provision of the sixth paragraph of this article, the public partner may not disclose to other candidates in the competitive dialogue procedure or other persons proposed solutions or other confidential information that has been submitted by a specific candidate participating in the competitive dialogue, without their written consent.

(8) Irrespective of the provisions of the second paragraph of this article, the public partner may determine that the competitive dialogue procedure be conducted in more than two successive stages, in order to reduce the number of solutions on which the dialogue will be conducted, whereby in excluding individual solutions it must act in accordance with the criteria set out in the public tender. The public partner must envisage the possibility of conducting the competitive dialogue procedure in several successive stages in the public tender.

(9) The public partner shall continue the dialogue with candidates until it finds a solution (solutions) that correspond with its aims and requirements.

(10) Upon deciding that the dialogue is concluded, the public partner shall notify all candidates that have participated in the final stage of the dialogue, and call upon them to submit bids drawn up with account taken of the solutions presented and defined during the dialogue. The submitted bids must contain all elements required and necessary for implementing the public-private partnership project.

(11) The public partner may require bidders to clarify, specify and harmonise the details of their bids with the partner's requirements, whereby through clarifying, specifying, harmonising and providing additional information they may not change their bids, if this might lead to a distortion of competition or have a discriminatory effect.

(12) The public partner shall assess received bids on the basis of criteria set out for the assessment of bids in the public tender, and shall then select the most economically advantageous bid.

(13) The public partner may require the bidder that submitted the most economically advantageous bid to clarify certain elements of such bid or to confirm undertakings given in the bid, provided that a clarification or confirmation would not signify a change in the bid that would distort competition or have a discriminatory effect.

(14) If it opts to purchase documents that comprehensively set out the legal, economic, technical, environmental and other conditions for carrying out the procedure or that signify some other original concept, the public partner may define rewards or payments to those participating in dialogue. Here the second paragraph of Article 35 of this Act (rights of promoter) shall apply mutatis mutandis. Rewards and payments must be included in the calculation of the estimated project cost.

(15) In the event that owing to the nature of the relationship, for the selection of the most advantageous bidder the rules of the act regulating commercial public services are applied, merely the decision on the selection of the most advantageous bidder has the form of an administrative decision on selection of a concessionaire.

(16) If a public-private partnership has the nature of public procurement, the competitive dialogue procedure may not be used in cases where the sole criterion is lowest price.

Article 47

(public tender obligation and exceptions)

(1) Use of the competitive dialogue procedure shall not exclude the obligations of the public partner relating to publication of notices and provided in other acts. For this reason, irrespective of the use of the procedure set out in Article 46 of this Act, for notifications in connection with transitional stages of the procedure, public tenders and selection of the public-private partnership contractor as well as possible exceptions, depending on the nature of the public-private partnership (public procurement, concession, equity), the public partner must use the Public Procurement Act and the act regulating commercial public services in those parts that relate to the selection of concessionaire, or this Act.

(2) Competitive dialogue shall not be used in the case of a public procurement partnership where the public partner is a client in the water, energy, transport and postal sectors. In this case the public partner may conduct the procedure of selecting the public-private partnership contractor through negotiation following preliminary publication, whereby the rules of this Act regarding competitive dialogue (Article 46) shall apply mutatis mutandis.

Article 48

(content of public tender)

(1) Publication of a public tender notice in accordance with a decision on public-private partnership and/or a public-private partnership instrument shall include at least:

- the criteria for selecting the most advantageous candidate and/or the criteria for progressing through the stages of competitive dialogue,

(2) In the public tender, alongside the information referred to in the preceding paragraph, the public partner may depending on the subject of the public-private partnership also publish other information; other information must be published were so required by law, by a regulation issued on the basis thereof or by a public-private partnership instrument.

(3) At the time of publication of the public tender, the public partner must enable interested parties access to the tender documentation and upon request provide tender documentation.

(4) Tender documentation must set out all the information and data that will enable candidates to formulate complete applications.

Article 49

(technical specifications)

(1) The public partner must formulate the technical specifications of the subject of a public-private partnership in such a way that they are determined with regard to the fulfilment of standards and with regard to the success or effectiveness that must be achieved, or the fulfilment of sufficiently precise functional requirements. Here it must ensure that the technical specifications would not distort competition or have a discriminatory effect.

(2) The reference material used for describing products or services shall be European standards or the national standards which implement them, although the public partner may not require that the requested product, service or construction will comply with the relevant standard. The public partner must also accept other products, services or constructions, although technology other than that set out in the standard has been used, if the end result that is the subject of the public-private partnership fulfils all the requirements regarding success, effectiveness and functional requirements.

Article 50

(criteria for selecting the most advantageous candidate)

(1) In the public tender or tender documentation the public partner shall set out the importance and weighting of each criterion on the basis of which it will select the most economically advantageous application.

(2) If in the opinion of the public partner it is not possible to determine the importance of criteria in advance, the public partner must nevertheless list the criteria in descending order of their importance.

(3) In the event of two or more most economically advantageous applications, the public partner may prioritise the selection of a subject that is not established and is not performing the activity for the purpose of obtaining profit, or may select the most advantageous application on the basis of previously determined social elements (employment of unemployed or disabled persons and so forth).

Article 51

(language)

(1) The public tender, tender and other documentation and procedure must be provided in the Slovenian language.

(2) The awarding authority may, in addition to documents and to execution of the procedure in Slovenian, use a foreign language and allow candidates to use Slovenian or a specified foreign language.

(3) The public partner may determine in the tender documentation that candidates may submit their applications partly or entirely in a specified foreign language. In the subsequent procedure the public partner may require candidates to submit, by a specified deadline, a translation of the application or part of the application not submitted in Slovenian. In the event of discrepancies, the documents submitted upon delivery of the application shall be considered valid.

(4) The provisions of this article applicable for the Slovenian language shall apply, in bilingual areas within the framework of the exercising of special rights by members of the Italian and Hungarian communities, mutatis mutandis for the Italian and Hungarian languages for candidates and for the Slovenian and Italian and Slovenian and Hungarian languages for public partners.

Article 52

(expert committee)

All members of the committee must have at least university-level education and working experience in the relevant area in order to facilitate expert assessment of applications.

(2) The chairman and members of the committee may not be in a business relationship with candidates, their representatives, members of boards, supervisory boards, founders, partners or shareholders with a controlling interest or persons with the power of attorney, or in any other way associated by interest, directly related or

The public partner may not appoint to the committee any person who was employed by or worked in any other way for a candidate, unless a period of three years has passed since employment or other form of cooperation was terminated. Fulfilment of the conditions for appointment to the committee shall be confirmed by each member in a written statement.

(3) The public partner must, on the proposal of the chairman or member of the committee, when so requested by a candidate or on the public partner's own initiative, appoint a new chairman or member of the committee immediately upon learning of grounds for exclusion or has discovered circumstances that cast doubt on the impartiality of the committee.

(4) If the public partner changes the committee structure after the candidates have already collected the tender documentation, the public partner must notify all those that have collected tender documentation to that effect.

(5) The expert committee shall participate in the procedure of selecting the private partner by reviewing and assessing applications and determining whether they fulfil the tender conditions, by composing reports and indicating which applications fulfil the tender requirements, by classifying applications such that it is clear which of the applications are most successful in meeting the criteria set and what subsequent ranking they achieve in terms of meeting the criteria, and shall submit such reports to the public partner referred to in Article 11 of this Act.

(6) The educational and other conditions, the method of appointment and detailed tasks and methods of work of the expert committee shall be determined by the public partner in the public-private partnership instrument.

(2) Up until the expiry of the tender deadline, candidates shall not have the right to view the applications of other candidates in the same tender.

(3) The opening of bids or other applications for selection a public-private partnership contractor shall be public, unless for reasons of protecting commercial (for instance in competitive dialogue) secrets or official, military or state secrets the public partner determines that the procedure of opening bids should not be public. Such decision must be communicated in the notice of the public tender.

(4) The expert committee shall not open applications that have arrived after the deadline given in the public tender or improperly submitted applications, but shall immediately return them unopened to the sender.

(5) An official record shall be kept of the opening of bids. Any remarks by representatives of the candidates on the progress of the public opening shall be recorded therein. The expert committee shall send the official record of the public opening to all candidates within eight days.

Article 54

(review and evaluation)

(1) After the completion of public opening, the expert committee shall review the applications and ascertain whether they fulfil the tender conditions.

(2) The committee may demand explanations from the candidates that would assist it with the review, comparison and evaluation of the applications. In so doing it must not allow a candidate to supplement or amend an application in any way. In particular, it must not allow a candidate to alter those documents in the application that would influence the evaluation of the application of a specific candidate (change of subject, price and other criteria).

(3) The committee may request only such supplementation of applications as will eliminate minor discrepancies with the requirements of the tender documentation and which shall in no way affect the substance of the application and assessment and ranking of the individual application in accordance with the established criteria for selection of the public-private partnership contractor.

(4) The committee may, with the consent of the candidate, correct calculation errors discovered during the review.

Article 55

(report)

Article 56

(instrument of selecting public-private partnership contractor)

Article 57

If the subject of the public-private partnership is a concession to perform commercial public services or other activity where for the purpose of protecting the public interest the law expressly provides the issuing of an administrative decision, the selection instrument shall be an individual administrative act (hereinafter: selection decision), on the basis of which a public-private partnership contract shall be made with the selected private partner in compliance with the provisions of Article 68 of this Act.

Article 58

(special nature of administrative procedure where the selection instrument is a decision)

(2) If the selection procedure is based on the submission of applications or opening of applications at a precise time, it shall not be possible in the event of missing such appointed deadline to permit a return to the previous state.

(3) Directly before the decision on selection is issued, the parties shall be acquainted orally with the course of the procedure and their success therein, and given a deadline, which must not be longer than 15 days, to file their comments. If the comments are not sent by this deadline, it shall be considered that the parties have no comments.

(4) Until the parties have been acquainted with the procedure referred to in the preceding paragraph, the reviewing and copying of those parts of the documents that refer to the applications of other parties in the procedure and the circumstances related thereto shall not be permitted.

(5) The declaration of the decision on selection shall name the party that has been chosen and the parties whose applications have been rejected. The decision on selection shall be sent to all parties in the procedure.

(2) If in the selection procedure the public partner does not select a public-private partnership contractor, it shall issue an instrument to that effect whereby it terminates the selection procedure, and shall set out all the parties whose applications have been rejected and the grounds for their rejection.

(3) With regard to legal remedies and/or administrative disputes against such instrument referred to in the second paragraph of this article, the provisions of this Act relating to the instrument of selecting a public-private partner shall be applicable.

Article 60

(rejection of an accepted candidate)

(1) Up until a contract on public-private partnership is concluded the public partner may reject the candidate that most successfully meets the criteria set, and select the next one on the ranking scale, if circumstances arise to indicate that the candidate will not be able to fulfil the contractual obligations.

(2) Circumstances indicating that a candidate will not be able to fulfil the obligations under a public-private partnership contract are in particular if proceedings of bankruptcy, liquidation or forced settlement are instigated against the candidate, if the candidate has not settled its liabilities regarding tax and other contributions provided by law, if it is shown that the application enclosed false information on the fulfilment of essential requirements, on the existence of acts of organised crime, corruption, fraud or money laundering and similar.

Article 64

(1) The administrative dispute procedure shall be rapid.

(2) If the revocation of a decision or other instrument would mean a disproportionate burdening of the private partner that has hitherto carried out the public-private partnership contract, the court shall not revoke such decision or other instrument, but shall determine its unlawfulness, and shall upon request award the plaintiff compensation or in respect of claiming recompense it shall direct the plaintiff to pursue litigation.

Article 65

(status of party)

(1) In the procedure of issuing a selection instrument and of legal and judicial protection, unless otherwise provided by a special act the status of party to proceedings shall be held only by applicants for public-private partnership contractors and the Ministry, and in the procedure of judicial protection also the public partner. There shall be no other participants (parties, side participants) in the procedure of issuing selection instruments.

(2) In the event that the selection of a public-private partnership contractor is conducted according to the rules of public procurement, prior to concluding a concession contract the awarding authority must by law issue to the selected concessionaire an administrative decision awarding it the right to perform the activity (fourth paragraph of Article 27 of this Act), and there shall be no other participants (parties, side participants) in the administrative procedure of issuing the decision.

Article 69

(exception in the event of voidness)

(1) A public-private partner relationship shall not be created in the event that the public-private partnership contract is void.

(2) A public-private partnership contract shall be void if it is made with a subject other than the one selected by the selection instrument, and such possibility was not foreseen in the procedure (Article 38 of this Act). The same shall apply in the event of a contract being made in contravention of the rules of publishing public tender notices or without conducting the procedure of selecting a public-private partner or an issued selection instrument, or if another public partner has made a contract without the consent of the founder.

(3) A public-private partnership contract shall also be void in the event of the selection instrument being revoked in a final judicial ruling and in the selection procedure for the same public-private partnership another contractor has been selected.

(3) The information entered in the record, except for personal data, shall be public.

7. DURATION OF RELATIONSHIP

Article 71

(duration of relationship)

(1) Public-private partnerships shall be long-term relationships established for a fixed period.

(2) The duration of the public-private partner relationship shall be determined such that it affords the public-private partnership contractor stability and security of investment, the possibility of effective and safe financial investment and the return of what it has invested, and in view of the nature of the subject of partnership during the relationship the return to the partnership of funds invested and the achievement on this of a proper market yield, while at the same time the contractor keeps, assumes and manages, depending on the nature of the public-private partnership, part of the commercial risk.

(3) The duration of the public-private partnership may be extended in a manner provided in advance by the public-private partnership instrument, where:

- owing to the measures of the public partner or other measures by an authority the contractor cannot implement the relationship;
- this is necessary owing to additional investment by the public-private partnership contractor resulting from requests of the public partner or its measures in the public interest.

(4) The duration of the public-private partnership may not be extended by more than half of its established duration.

(5) In the event of a public procurement partnership, any extension of the relationship must also be in compliance with the Public Procurement Act.

(3) The amount of compensation upon termination of the public-private partnership shall be regulated by the public-private partnership contract, where there shall be no application of the rules of the act regulating legal material relations regarding the consequences of terminating the building right.

Article 74

(awarding legal operations to third parties)

(1) The public-private partnership contractor may not transfer activities that are the subject of the public-private partnership in part or entirely to a third party, unless it has obtained in advance the written consent of the public partner for this or this has been expressly provided by this Act (project company, entry into relationship).

(2) In awarding legal operations to third parties (purchase of goods etc.) and the transfer of special and exclusive rights, the public-private partnership contractor must act in accordance with the principle of transparency and non-discrimination regarding citizenship. The contractor may transfer special and exclusive rights to other contractors only in accordance with the law and with the prior consent of the public partner.

(3) In the event of fulfilling the conditions for a public procurement client pursuant to the Public Procurement Act, in the awarding of orders for the supply of goods, services and works and other legal operations that fulfil the assumptions of public procurement, the public-private partnership contractor must act in compliance with the Public Procurement Act.

Barring commercial public services or other activities where in order to protect the public interest the law expressly provides the issuing of administrative decisions, unilateral amendments to the contract or other unilateral encroachments on the relationship shall be governed mutatis mutandis by the rules of obligational law regarding compensation liability for breach of contract.

(2) If the public-private partnership contractor performs other activities, it must keep separate accounts for each activity of the public-private partnership and for other activities.

(3) In cases referred to in the preceding paragraph, prior to implementation of the public-private partner relationship the contractor must submit to the public partner for its consent the principles according to which it separates accounting by activities (keys for dividing joint and general costs by individual cost centres or bearers of costs, transfer prices and supervision thereof, division of loss and profit, division of profits, whether there will be refinancing of debt and so forth). The public partner may refuse its consent only if the proposed principles might threaten the unimpeded operation or supervision of the public-private partner relationship.
