

Tamara Vatsadze

Tam lives in Tbilisi, Georgia, has a pedagogic background, one as interpreter-translator (English-Russian-Georgian) as well as the legal degree of a LL.B. (Tbilisi State University). She also has a diploma of a summer school in European Studies in Grenoble/France. After having worked for various higher education projects in Georgia and on international conferences (a. o. by the International Mathematical Association) in Romania, France and Germany, she became Training Assistant for various EU projects, among which also GEPLAC (Georgian-European Policy and Legal Advice Centre) and SIPCA (Support for Implementation of the Partnership and Cooperation Agreement). At present, she works for private courses in foreign languages. She is since January 2011 Associate Editor of EUFAJ.